Mark Addy - Submission on the draft copyright Code of Practice for S92A

This law needs further thought. (regarding Section 92A of the Copyright (New Technologies) Act )

I really think this law inhibits our freedom and deserves further thought.

Feel free to educate me and prove me wrong but, to me this law sounds unlawful.

First point that makes it unlawful is that it assumes you are guilty first and you have to prove your innocence after the fact. We fall under British law which states the opposite. Dutch law on the other hand works this way.

Second point is that packets that are downloaded have to be extracted first to their original format. This means the ISP is breaking this very law by joining the packets and decompressing the potential violated material. This is a mockery of our fine legal system.

Third point is that this law makes the ISP the implementors of the law. Surely it's the job of the Police/Courts to implement the law not private companies.

Please take this objection into earnest consideration.

kind regards
